

Jan Einar Thorsen, a Norwegian skier who competed from 1987 to 1994, achieved significant success on the world stage. He won three World Cup races, two in Super-G and one in Giant slalom, culminating in the Super-G World Cup title in 1994. He also excelled at the Olympics, winning bronze in Super-G at the 1992 Albertville Games and placing fifth in Downhill. Though he narrowly missed a medal in the 1994 Lillehammer Olympics, finishing fourth in Giant slalom, Thorsen solidified his place as a top-tier skier. ■

== World Cup victories ==

Norwegian skier Jan Einar Thorsen, who competed from 1987 to 1994, had a successful career, marked by three World Cup wins (two in Super-G and one in Giant slalom) and the 1994 Super-G World Cup title. He also achieved Olympic success, earning a bronze medal in Super-G at the 1992 Albertville Games, while finishing fifth in Downhill. Although he narrowly missed another Olympic medal at the 1994 Lillehammer Games, placing fourth in Giant slalom, Thorsen solidified his reputation as a talented and consistent competitor. ■

== References ==

Jan Einar Thorsen, a Norwegian alpine skier who competed from 1987 to 1994, achieved notable success on the international stage. He secured three World Cup victories, including two in Super-G and one in Giant slalom, and was crowned the Super-G World Cup champion in 1994. His Olympic career included a bronze medal in Super-G at the 1992 Albertville Games and a fifth-place finish in Downhill. He narrowly missed another Olympic medal at the 1994 Lillehammer Games, taking fourth place in Giant slalom. ■

== External links ==